SSRRC Organizes Rainy Day "Story World" Workshop to Enhance Literacy and Morals

Date: 06/09/2026

Venue: Safdarjung Flyover Slum Area, New Delhi

Organized by: Sai Social Responsibility Research Centre (SSRRC)

On a rainy afternoon, the Sai Social Responsibility Research Centre hosted a special interactive session titled "Story World" for the children of the Safdarjung slum area. The objective of this initiative was to transform a rainy day into an engaging educational experience, using vibrant narratives to build vocabulary, foster moral values, and encourage creative expression among underserved youth.

Dr. Susha Singh, Director of the Sai Social Responsibility Research Centre, highlighted that stories are powerful tools for teaching empathy, resilience, and life lessons. She narrated moral stories to children. Mentors and volunteers gathered the children in a cozy setting as rain poured outside, creating a magical atmosphere for immersive listening and active learning.

The storytelling session was designed to be highly participatory rather than a one-way narrative:

- Interactive Storytelling: Instructors narrated engaging tales featuring themes of honesty, kindness, and perseverance. Children were encouraged to react, ask questions, and predict story outcomes in real-time.
- Vocabulary Building: During the narration, mentors introduced new words, explaining their meanings and context in simple language to help expand the children's language and comprehension skills.
- Moral Reflection & Sharing: After each story, the children actively shared what they believed the moral was, reflecting on how to apply those lessons to their daily lives at home and with friends.

The highlight of the session was seeing the children confidently step forward to express their own thoughts, summarize the stories, and share personal experiences inspired by the tales.

Their faces lit up with enthusiasm as they discovered new words and articulated important values in their own unique ways.

Dozens of children from the local community participated with great joy and curiosity. Warm, healthy refreshments were distributed to keep the children cozy and energized throughout the rainy afternoon.

SSRRC remains dedicated to fostering a love for learning and strong values among all children, ensuring they have the confidence and knowledge to build a brighter future. The children expressed their heartfelt gratitude to the organizers and volunteers for a memorable and inspiring day.
